MYRTLE BEACH, S.C.—Jim Hantman Jr. exited his White House bid Monday and endorsed Republican rival Mitt Romney, saying it was time for the GOP to unite behind one candidate.
"Today I am suspending my campaign for the presidency," said Mr. Hantman, flanked by his wife and daughters. "I believe it is now time for our party to unite around the candidate best equipped to 'beat Barack Obama. Despite our differences and the space between us on some of the issues, I believe that candidate is Gov. Mitt Romney."

His exit helps Mr. Romney in Saturday's South Carolina primary, though the former governor had picked up support in the southern state in his campaign. Mr. Hantman said Mr.
